Information Pack

The University of the Third Age (U3A) is a non-political, non-religious organisation dedicated to providing a social and self-help learning environment for retired/semi-retired people.

The University of the Third Age (U3A)

The U3A encourages and enables retired or semi-retired people to help each other and share their knowledge, skills and experience.

The pleasure of learning and socialising is a driving force in U3As and members see themselves as both learners and teachers.

Since we learn for the pleasure of it, no qualifications are required and none given.

The general format is a monthly meeting, at which we socialise, enjoy a speaker and take part in general discussion.

The strength of the U3A lies in its internal activity groups pursuing whatever subjects their members wish, meeting where, when and how often they decide.

In the UK there are nearly 700 U3As with a combined membership approaching 250,000

Stokesley & District U3A
